Unit courses (6 ECTS)

Prehistory of the Iberian Peninsula I G1830 - Fall

This course aims to frame the Prehistory of the Iberian Peninsula within the broader context of universal Prehistory, understanding the initial settlement of the peninsula as part of the human colonization of Europe. Additionally, it seeks to analyse the historical development of primitive hunter-gatherer communities during the Palaeolithic and Mesolithic periods, examining their transformation over time and exploring the initial processes of change in their modes of production that led to the emergence of early tribal societies.

Prehistory of the Iberian Peninsula II G213 - Spring

This course aims to provide an understanding of the processes that led to the adoption of agricultural lifestyles by hunter-gatherers in the Iberian Peninsula, alongside knowledge of the general characteristics of early agrarian societies across its various regions. It further seeks to deepen students' comprehension of social complexity, applying this concept to Iberian groups, and to familiarize them with the traits of the earliest societies showing evidence of social stratification in the peninsula. The course also covers the social changes brought about by colonization in the first millennium BCE, encourages debate on the origins of state organization in Iberia, and promotes a respectful and proactive attitude toward the preservation of archaeological heritage. Additionally, it aims to develop students' critical thinking skills in response to the misinterpretations of Prehistory and to introduce them to archaeological methods used in the study of late prehistoric societies.

Geographic Information Systems II (Vector-Based)

G184 - Spring

This course aims to facilitate students the acquisition of theoretical knowledge and technical abilities that allow them to design and develop a GIS project according to a correct methodology.
